Designated Ph.D. Minor in the Transdisciplinary Study of Visual Cultures

Capitalizing on the rich offerings in the Study of Visual Cultures presently being offered at UW-Madison, graduate students in departments across the university may now obtain a designated Ph.D. minor in this new field.

Students wishing to earn the designated minor are required to complete a minimum of 12 credits in specific coursework: (1) either “AH801: The Study of Visual Cultures: Historiography, Theory, Methods” or equivalent (3 cr); (2) either “AH802: Topics in Visual Cultures” or equivalent (3 cr); and (3) “Independent Study in Visual Cultures” (3 cr); and at least 3 credits from among a wide range of listed or cross-listed courses offered by several Visual Cultures core faculty and nearly 80 affiliated members. For a more comprehensive listing of these courses, please visit our website under the “Curriculum” tab.¹

For more information on eligible courses or on how to declare the designated Ph.D. minor in the Transdisciplinary Study of Visual Cultures, please contact:

The Center for Visual Cultures
University of Wisconsin-Madison
218 Memorial Library, 728 State Street
Madison, WI 53706
Tel. 608.890.3930
www.visualculture.wisc.edu
cvc@education.wisc.edu

I. Please note that “double counting” courses in both the minor and major areas of Ph.D. study is not allowed. Also, while every effort has been made to keep this site up to date and complete, some new courses may not be reflected on this list. Also, UW Graduate School regulations concerning the use of cross-listed courses as part of the Ph.D. minor are to be observed when selecting courses.

¹ Revised November 15, 2010